1. Starting with a 2x1 piece of paper, valley fold in half.

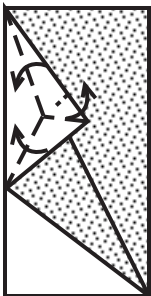

2. Mountain fold. (This fold could be replaced by a pinched landmark halfway along the edge.)

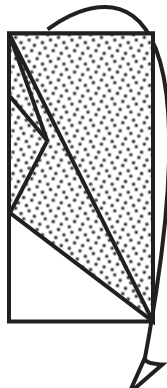

3. Valley fold.

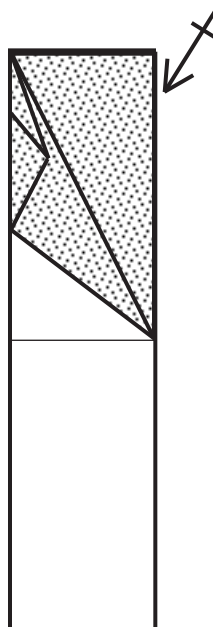

4. Valley fold.

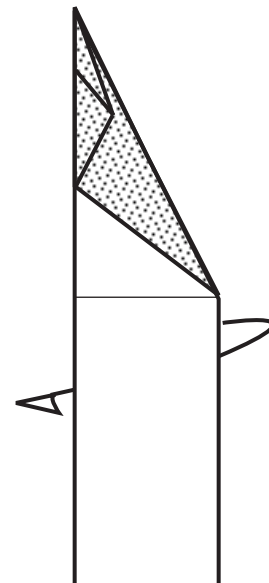

5. Rabbit ear.

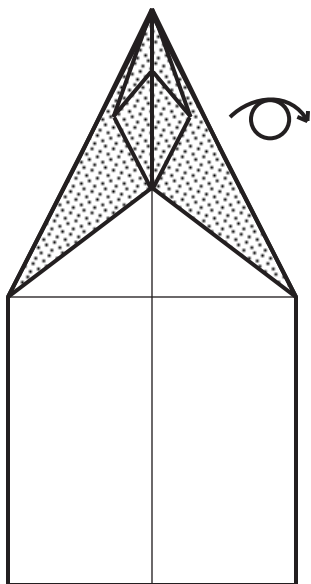

6. Unfold

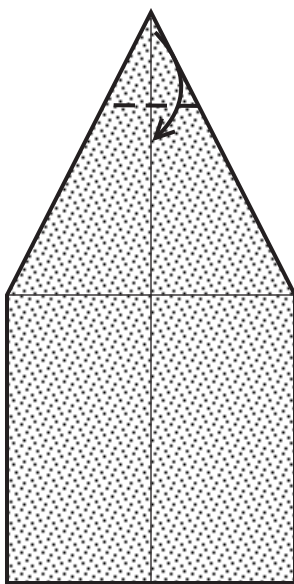

7. Repeat steps 3-5 on the other side.

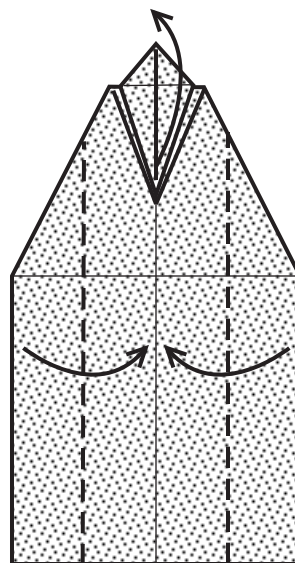

8. Unfold.

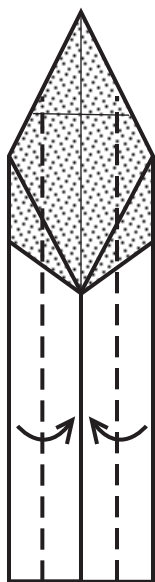

9. Turn over.

10. Valley fold. This fold sets a landmark for the crimp/swivel fold in step 17.

11. Fold tip back up and valley fold edges to center.

12. Valley fold to center again.

13. Inside reverse fold lower corner.

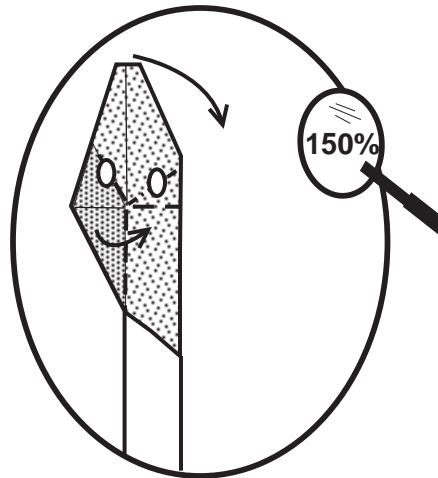

14. Valley fold

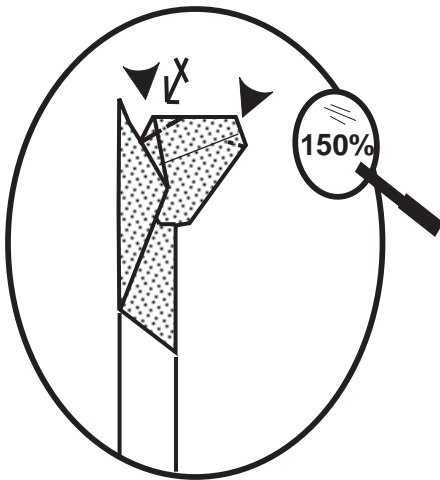

15. Tuck the back corner between the layers of the inside reverse to lock the bottom.

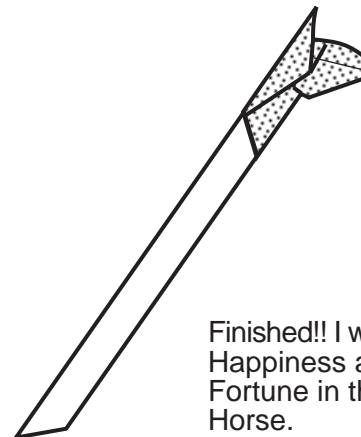

16. Crease at a bit less than the 1/4 mark. Open up the tip and fold along the crease to the inside. Almost like an open sink. Collapse the head back in place.

17. This fold can be a bit awkward the first time. It is a combination of a crimp and a swivel. Using the horizontal crease made in step 11 as the pivot line crimp fold the head downward and to the outside. The shaded area will swivel evenly to each side exposing the ears. The model should lay flat. (White dots mark the new folds created in the move.)

18. Small inside reverse to form the eye repeat on back. Inside reverse the small flap on the inside of the muzzle.

Finished!! I wish you Heath, Happiness and Good Fortune in the Year of the Horse.
